'It Was My Duty,' Says Kay Richards

Thursday, February 19, 1970

"I feel it was my duty," said Kay S. Richards, youngest juror in the trial of the "Chicago Seven." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Richards Sr., 624 S. 15th St., Escanaba.

Kay, 23, who has been employed by IBM Science Research as a computer operator since her graduation from Holy Name High School, was drawn for jury duty in Chicago more than five months ago. The long and historic trial ended yesterday, and Kay telephoned her mother, Gladys, late last night.

They talked for a long time and "there were some tears shed," said Mrs. Richards today, "But we are so proud of her. She might have tried excuses to get off, but right at the start she said 'Mother, I feel it was my duty.'

The harrowing experience left Kay still convinced that she had fulfilled her obligation as a good citizen - but it was emotionally difficult for her and she hopes her employer will grant her a short leave of absence before returning to her job. Today she is at an undisclosed address receiving (as are the other jurors) the full protection of the law. Mrs. Richards visited Kay briefly in Chicago in the second week of the trial. She sat in the court room observing scenes "in which I saw Judge Hoffman insulted constantly," said Mrs.

End of the trial and dismissal of the jury brought representatives of the news media flooding around the 10 women and two men. "Mother, if on TV you saw a little girl wearing slacks, with a paper bag over her head, running out of the Palmer House, that was me," Kay told her mother last night. "When things settle down we expect her home for a weekend," said Mrs. Richards.

Quite often, I'm made to feel like the neighborhood villain when I must refuse to refill a prescription. But there is a very good reason for such a refusal.

A prescription is your doctor's personal request for specific drugs to be used as part of his treatment of your illness. He specifies how much of the drugs you are to receive, and he will sometimes place a limit on this by stating "Do not refill." This usually means that he wants to see the patient again, before providing more medication.

I would be wrong if I gave you the wrong amount of drug, or the wrong kind of a drug. And I'd also be wrong in giving you a drug over and over again, by overlooking the doctor's instructions about refilling.

Now The Answers

What do you think of the Escanaba Area public schools?

A lot of people in the community were asked that question several months ago in a survey form prepared by the school district's Information Office directed by Mrs. Cynthia Winters and a surprisingly high percentage of those asked about the schools gave their opinions.

Results of the survey were put together in a 54-page volume and released to the Board of Education last week. And some of the findings are quite interesting. For example:

• There appears to be little question that reading is considered the most vital area of instruction. It was listed as the "most important" by the greatest number of respondents, ranked at the top of the list of the subjects the school district is "neglecting or not spending enough time on" and "special teaching help for the slow readers" was overwhelmingly favored (1,723 to 69 with 65 saying they didnt' know.)

• Despite the apparent protests against the Board of Education and school administration in recent years (repeated "No" votes on miliage questions, the Circuit Court suit on the bus issue, etc.) most of the people feel they are doing a pretty decent job of running the schools. The school board received about a 2-1 endorsement of its policy, judgment and informational decisions and the school administration also received a favorable reading on its leadership, judgment

· The people who answered generally would rather see taxes increased than school services or program reduced.

• Although more persons (1,153 to 661) said the discipline in the school district was about right rather than too easy, the response was almost the opposite (1,150 to 693 in favor) when asked if there should be "more rules about the way boys and girls can dress for school."

• There appeared to be general dissatisfaction about the lunch arrangements with many people expressing a desire to have a hot lunch program established again.

The survey, of course, is not a definitive statement of the thoughts of the entire district, but with a 41.5 per cent return of the surveys distributed (it should be noted that not everyone in the district received a survey so the 41.5 per cent does not represent 41.5 per cent of the total district population) it should be a valuable resource for the present and future school boards.

Mrs. Winters and the volunteer workers who tabulated the results, typed and published the final report took great pains to include almost any response which was made, whether or not they agreed with the thought. Of the 54 page report, 28 are devoted to publication of individual comments about the school situation. No attempt was made to provide answers to the questions, although in some instances there might have been, in an attempt to leave the survey as a survey and not what might be termed a piece of administration and school board prop-

Now that the survey has been completed and published, however, the Board of Education and administration should consider some sort of a response to some of the questions and comments, if for no other reason than to let the people who responded know that the district is aware of their comments. If a published response for general distribution is not considered feasible, then perhaps individual meetings could be scheduled in each school of the district to discuss the specific comments made by parents in those areas. Giving people the opportunity to ask questions and make comments isn't enough. The Board of Education and administration should make every effort to answer them.

Finnish History

A book of special interest to Upper Peninsulans with Finnish blood in their veins is reviewed in Michigan History, published by the Michigan Historical Commission.

The book, "The Finns in North America: A Social Symposium," is a collection of essays edited by Ralph J. Jalkanen, president of Suomi College, Hancock, the only institution of higher education founded by Finns in America. There are six parts to the book and Jalkanen, in the book's final essay, explores the need for preserving the Finnish ethnic heritage. In doing so, he looks at various historical principles and concludes that "a more comprehensive precept for a multi-cultural society may be one in which the individual discovers his cultural role under the basic democratic values of freedom, responsibility and their balance." The reviewer, W. J. Jokinen, Louisiana

State University, says:

"The book is not intended to be a comprehensive analysis of Finnish activities in the new world. As Jalkanen makes clear in his forword, 'certain lacunae are immediately evident.' The omissions are glaring. Little or no attention is given to Finnish participation in labor organizations, the cooperative movement and temperance societies, all of which have been significant in the totality of the Finnish experience in

"In short, it is a good book as far as it goes, but it leaves many important things unsaid. Within these limitations it fulfills the editor's hope that it will help the descendants of the Finns to understand their origins, goals and loyalties."

Peninsula Potpourri

The startling fact that 98 per cent of 16 and 17 year old students in the Bessemer area have heard of teenagers using drugs on the Gogebic Range was presented at a meeting of the Gogebic County drug abuse committee. Of 162 students surveyed, 159 had heard of drug use by teenagers in that area, John Ostrom, guidance counsellor at Ironwood High School, said. He added that 98 knew friends or acquaintances who have used drugs, 49 have been offered the use of drugs, 16 have used marijuana or other strength for themselves by fused by scientist George alive, today would be be updrugs and 52 knew where to obtain marijuana, LSD or methadrine.

Change Won't Come As Panthers Predict

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

In his revealing story of his days with the Black Panthers, "Picking Up the Gun," Earl Anthony puts such things as the attempt on the part of Panther sympathizers to disrupt court proceedings in a real revolutionary perspective.

The various efforts of the New Left, whether black or white, to discredit the "conspiracy" trials in Chicago and New York are to be understood as the U.S. radical equivalent of Fidel Castro's abortive attack on Fort Moncado in Cuba, which first made Fidel a theory is that a movement must prove its revolutionary commitment by attempting impossible things that can only end in immediate disaster. Thus martyrs are created, and symbols provided for the fu-

He must have a correct intuitive feeling that his minority demands for today will be the demands of the majority tomorrow. When the Black Panthers in the San Francisco Bay region began to carry .45 calibre pistols and shotguns in public and engaged in shootouts with the "pigs" (just who "set up" whom for the violence may be arguable), more than one person who had lived through the Twenties and Thirties made a mental note that this was something right out of the history of pre-Hit-

But the Nazi street fighters and beer hall putschists were in tune with the future: they could count on the ultimate acquiescence of a majority when economic depression made the restrictive terms of the Versailles Treaty seem too onerous for the whole German nation

The pragmatic question that Eldridge Cleaver and Bobby Seale and other Panther leaders should be asking of themselves is whether they are yet within 100 light years of a real revolutionary situation

The Panthers themselves are a minority within a minority. Earl Anthony, who was himself purged from the Panthers, tells of the difficulties which the Panthers had in trying to cooperate with the "Establishment Left." and he complains that America "leaves so many openings for whites to move back into respectability." Coming from Los Angeles, he speaks of "westside collegetrained blacks" who do not "dig" the Panther revolution, and even detects, quite against his will, an "aspiring bourgeoisie" among the "eastside black masses.

Whatever may be happening in the distant future, the prospects for a majority revolutionary movement in the U. S. seem rather dim at the East doubled and there I played the hand. West led a heart and East took the ace and returned a heart. I finessed the jack, led a spade to the ace, ruffed a club, cashed the king of spades, and conceded a spade and a diamond to make four spades doubled.

There was nothing unusual about either the bidding or the play, and I naturally thought the result might be duplicated at the other table to produce a tied board.

However, I was mistaken, even though the final contract proved to be exactly the same. East (Peter Leventritt) opened with a heart and here also South overcalled with four spades. This time West (Sam Fry, Jr.) doubled and, after three passes, led the six of hearts, just as at the first table.

But Leventritt made the magnificent play of the queen on the first trick, instead of the ace. As a result, South went down one. Leventritt reasoned that the six was either a singleton or doubleton, or possibly a low-card lead from three to the king or jack, but that in all these cases his play of the queen could do no harm and might in fact do some good.

His judgment was well rewarded when South took the queen with the king and led a spade to the ace. Declarer could now do no better than lead a heart from dummy. Leventritt rose with the ace and returned the ten, which West ruffed. West then led a diamond to Leventritt's ace, and anothr heart lead permitted West to score his queen of spades for the setting trick. © King Features Syndicate

"He built the first George Washington Bridge, then blew it up so the British couldn't follow him," said another firstgrader, no doubt a devotee of

A classmate in P. S. 45, Queens, N. Y. also associated George Washington with wars -"the Italian wars." Asked if he might mean the Indian Wars) this youngster was adamant that it was indeed the Italian wars.

Regardless of what George Washington's birthday means to you now, come 1971 it will mean, probably, a three-day weekend. For starting next year, George Washington's birthday will be observed on the third Monday in February, rather than on the traditional date of Feb. 22.

Other holidays affected by the federal Uniform Monday Holiday Act, which guarantees most Americans five long during his earlier years was a weekends every year, are: Memorial Day, to be observed the last Monday in May; Veterans Day, which will fall on the fourth Monday in October; Columbus' birthday, to be observed the second Monday in Ocend about young George chop- tober, and of course the old ping down the cherry tree-ex- standby, Labor Day, to be celebrated the first Monday in Sep-

For the record, George Washington was born Feb. 11, 1732. The Feb. 22 birthdate resulted when the British switched from the Julian calendar to the Gregorian calendar in 1752. To make the two calendars agree, the British dropped 11 days out of September, thereby moving up Washington's birthday from Feb. 11 to Feb. 22. Washington himself celebrated the Feb. date as late as 1798, two years before his death (there is no record of what date he chose thereafter.) In 1798, according to his diary, "went with the family to a ball in Alexandria given by the citizens of it and its vicinity in commemoration of the anniversary of my birthday."

Warmer temperatures of recent days failed to bring an upsurge in ice fishing success, and results throughout the U. P. have been generally spotty.

Rainbow fishing on Johnson and Camp 7 Lakes is off again, on again with moderate success. According to the Department of Natural Resources, the hot spot for this week is the Munising area just west of Grand Island where ice anglers using smelt have been catching some nice lake trout.

Elmer White, owner of White's Bayshore Cabins, reports that several lucky anglers are making good catches of perch near the red buoy off his place when the weather's warm. Small minnows and wigglers are the fish-getters.

"When the weather warms they start to hit," White said. He added that some fair to good messes of perch have also been taken just off Nelson's near Rapid River.

More Coho

The Department of Natural Resources announced today that 100,000 coho salmon smolts have been designated for planting in the Whitefish River this spring. The fish will probably be planted in the East and West Branch of the Whitefish, reported Cliff Long, DNR district fish biologist.

Long said he is trying to trade several thousand of his laterunning fish for more early-running Alaskan-strain coho, but so far he hasn't had any takers.

"I've also asked for 100,000 brown trout for stocking in Little Bay de Noc. The way things are going it looks like I'm finally going to get them," Long said. "I'm still keeping my fingers crossed," he added. Long has been trying for the past few years to get a heavy plant of browns for the bay.

Coho Problem An important fishing question was posed recently in a monthly outdoor magazine. It asked: When does a coho salmon stop being a game fish and become a trash fish slightly lower

The answer to this question is currently being debated between the DNR fish division and law enforcement division. The answer can only be one.

The coho salmon in its silver phase is a good game fish, but once this fish reaches the dark spawning phase it becomes virtually worthless. To prohibit anglers who wish to take these dying salmon should be a crime.

Why not up the limit once these fish reach their darkened state? Why have thousands on thousands of coho rotting and ruiping our streams? Let's take as many salmon as possible.

To do this we need even more lenient regulations regarding the taking of coho. Liberalize the snagging rule allowing anglers to use 3/4 inch curl hooks and weights less than two onces as close to the hook as they want.

Northern Michigan streams are being ruined by the thous- were almost quiet about it. ands of carcasses rotting causing the actual pollution of our streams. There is also mounting evidencee that coho offer over- fought to a 1-1 National Hockey Canadiens have one victory in sion. whelming competition for stream brown and brook trout which also spawn in the fall.

Sure, we have rules and we must have limits, but we must also figure out some way to eliminate the multitude of salmon carcasses that are right now rotting in many Northern Michigan streams. This is not the sportsman's problem, but he can solve it. It's up to the DNR to use a little common sense and allow the anglers to take as many fish as feasable.

Card of Thanks

Erickson

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to all who sent cards, flowers and other expressions of kindness and concern while I was a patient at St. Francis Hospital. Your thoughtfulness will always be remembered

Mrs. Alcott Erickson

Petrovich

We wish to thank all the people who so kindly of-fered and gave freely of their sympathies and assist-ance during the recent loss of our loved one, Dorothy Petrovich. Our stncere thanks and gratitude for all those comforting acts, they have meant much to us.

The Family Of Dorothy Petrovich

In Memoriam

Franks

In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Viola Franks whom God called home on February 19, 1967. We do not need a special day, To bring her to our minds, The days we do not think of her, Are very hard to find, Within our store of memories, She holds a place apart For no one else should ever be More cherished in our hearts.
